Hancock Marina gets $500,000

BY MARY G. SEILEY

The state Legislature has earmarked $500,000 for a Hancock County marina project, and a big push is expected to shake another $500,000 loose for the proposed facility.

Other projects funded in the measure include $150,000 for repairs to the Pass Christian Harbor, and $175,000 to repair Long Beach's Harbor.

State Sen. William Johnson said last week that legislators had tired of waiting for Department of Marine Resources officials to allocate money that's accumulated from leases of tidelands to casinos. Thus, the Legislature spelled out what DMR must do with the $3.5 million in fiscal 1996's tideland receipts, he said.

Meanwhile, there's an urgency in seeing DMR spend what it's already gotten in tideland funds, Johnson said. DMR still hasn't disbursed the state's 1995 tideland collections, he said, and that pot of money will be turned back into the general fund unless it's doled out to area governments by July 1.

Hancock County's marina project, he said, was supposed to receive $500,000 from the 1995 tidelands pool.

The $1 million from tidelands money, and $260,000 the county received from sale of its former Bayou Caddy marina property, would finance construction of a proposed new marina off Pleasure Street, officials say.

There is dispute, however, over what DMR plans to do with the $3.2 million it has to disburse during this fiscal year. David Ruppel, who oversees tidelands funds for the department, said Thursday his agency had devised a plan for allocating at least some of that money.

But when DMR learned that the Legislature planned to legislate how the 1996 fund is spent, Ruppel said, DMR decided to hold off in releasing any of this year's money.

"We didn't want to contradict what the Legislature might do," he said. Since passage of the bill, he added, the agency has not re-evaluated the situation.

Ruppel said the department has $3.2 million in tideland receipts on hand. And he disagreed with Johnson's contention that the 1995 money goes back to the state general fund unless allocated by July 1.

Ruppel said he believes the money can be carried forward from one year to the next by the department.

While Hancock County is to receive some of that money, Ruppel said, DMR had planned to make it available for any Residents petition for halt

Forty area residents have petitioned the cities of Waveland and Bay St. Louis to force a halt to dredging in a sand pit at the eastern ends of Longo and Fayard streets. Samuel Sterling told officials last week the residents are "gravely concerned" that continued excavations in the area could damage the stability of nearby CSX track lines. He also raised concerns about possible harm to wildlife in the area. City officials promised to look into the situation. (Echo staff photo by Richard

Bay Flag celebration to be largest ever

BY ELLIS C. CUEVAS

The largest Flag Day celebration ever held on the Mississippi Gulf Coast is scheduled for Bay St. Louis on Saturday, June 10, said Gene Schloegel, organizer.

The big celebration will be held 10 a.m. at the Bay Flag Memorial at the Hancock County Walking Track in front of Hancock Medical Center, U.S. 90, Bay St. Louis.

To be unveiled at the Flag Day celebration will be Bay St. Louis' new 15x25 ft. American Flag, which will be flown on special holidays only.

A larger flag would have been purchased, but due to space restrictions, the city settled for the 15x25 ft. size, Schloegel added.

Schloegel said this year's event will include active duty military units from both Mississippi and Louisiana.

From Louisiana will be the 4th Marine Aircraft Wing Band, The Headquarters Color Guard and their Marine Uniform Pageant, of the New Orleans area.

Representing Mississippi will be the Keesler Air Force Color Guard and 100 Flag Unit, Naval Construction Battalion Color Guard and the 1355th Quartermaster Mississippi Army National Guard of Hancock County.

United States Congressman Gene Taylor has already committed to participate with invitations also sent to United States Senator Trent Lott and U.S. Congressman Sunny Montgomery, who sponsored the Amendment to the U.S. Constitution which will make desecration of the American Flag a criminal act punishable by law.

State Senator Bill Johnson and Representative J.P. Compretta have accepted invitations with Governor Kirk Fordice to be included if his schedule allows.

Bay annexation study covers 1,500 acres

BY MARY G. SEILEY

Bay St. Louis city officials have surveyed some 1,500 acres as potential annexation territory -- but Diamondhead is "definitely not" in the city's potential growth plans.

Municipal Clerk Kay Johnson said Tuesday a land use survey has been completed by city staffers of an area bounded generally by the northern edge of Waveland's city limits along Highway 90, northward to the Jourdan River. The study area is bounded by Bay St. Louis city limits on the east, and Highway 603 on the west, said Johnson.

City officials were recently approached by residents of Jourdan River Isles subdivision concerning potential annexation into the Bay's corporate limits. That area is included in the survey.

At the same time, the city is wrapping up work on a comprehensive plan that will guide the city's development over the next 20 to 25 years.

Johnson said the land use survey was done in conjunction with the comprehensive plan -- although the area isn't in the city limits, the city needs to consider that larger, developed area as a potential growth territory, she said.

The study began and ended with a land use survey to familiarize officials with how much of the territory is developed, and how.

That has bearing on how much the city would have to invest in newly-annexed areas to provide services, such as costly water, sewer and gas lines, as well as police and fire protection, she said.

Staff who conducted the survey have not made a recommendation to City Council on whether to seriously consider an annexation attempt, said Johnson.

The city collects no taxes for general operations of government. Johnson said that fact soured the annexation picture for the city somewhat, because

"CUEVAS' QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

The Letter to the Editor from the four young ladies in Thursday's edition really got me to put the thinking cap on.

The letter mentioned the fact that teenagers really do not have anything to do in the area.

Usually when a comment such as that is made by a youngster to an older person, they respond that they are lucky to have so many things to do today.

In chatting with three of the four young ladies, I really began to understand their situation.

So I began to think about what we had in the Bay-Waveland area when I was a teenager.

First, I was raised in Waveland and attended school in Bay St. Louis. So I was exposed to both cities.

The five high schools in Bay St. Louis, Bay High, St. Joseph Academy, St. Stanislaus, St. Rose de Lima and Valena C. Jones all had school dances.

In Bay St. Louis there were three picture shows plus a drive-in on the highway and one show on Coleman Avenue in Waveland.

There were two community piers in Waveland for swimming.

A Youth Center in Bay St. Louis had all types of activities, even dancing lessons.

True, television only in its infancy, we could pick up only three channels as there were only a few programs.

There was the Bay St. Louis Softball League, or it may have been called something else. The games were played at the Morreale ball park with an entry fee for spectators.

Many of the activities were close to home, because the community was not very mobile as it is today.

Several of us as teenagers had jobs, which is really no different then today.

Another difference was that most youngsters had chores.

Boys cut wood, cut grass (those mowers did not have 3 or 4 h.p. engines, the power was push power), girls had laundry and household chores, such as cooking, among other things to do.

Possibly one of the problems youngsters may have today is that they have too much free time.

All of our time had to be planned to include chores as well as recreation.

There are only a few youths today who spend as much time as we did with jobs and chores. Some youths do not have any responsibilities.

Today there is little league, soccer, softball leagues, basketball leagues, etc.

Did we have more activities than the youth of today? You will probably get good arguments for both sides.

Fordice, Molpus to face off at MEC

This year's gubernatorial showdown gets an unusually early start when the two contenders for the governor's office in November face off for the first time April 13 at the annual meeting of the Mississippi Economic Council.

Republican Governor Kirk Fordice and his Democratic challenger Secretary of State Dick Molpus, will jointly be questioned by a panel chosen from the business community and also will make opening and closing statements before the statewide business organization.

It's not billed as a debate but it will probably be as close to one as anything in the foreseeable future. Certainly having the two candidates who will vie in November on the same platform with the election seven months out is a first in the memory of this writer.

Of course, both Fordice and Molpus have to dispatch token opponents in their respective party primaries in August, but that is a given. What makes this gubernatorial derby extraordinary is that Molpus doesn't have to face a traditional Democratic primary bloodletting to get his party's nomination. And Fordice doesn't have a major foe to contend with in the GOP primary as he did four years ago.

The Molpus camp has recently been buoyed by the results of their first poll, taken by the Garin-Hart Research Group, the present polling organization of Peter Hart, the longtime Democratic pollster who has done surveys in Mississippi in the past.

Chiefly, what the poll — taken in mid-March with 610 respondents — showed, is that Fordice is far from unbeatable. One key figure that came out of the poll is that Fordice's "reelectable" rating stands at 41 percent, as against a 50 percent plus rating which an incumbent is supposed to have to be considered virtually invulnerable. The electability reading asked the voter if they think Fordice should be reelected or if they will consider someone else.

Perhaps an even more significant figure the poll found is that only 30 percent of the voters "firmly" support Fordice for reelection.

Unlike findings from polls over the last few years, jobs or the economy was not the issue foremost in the minds of Mississippi voters. It was education — considered tops by 33 percent. Taxes, crime and welfare were down the list at slightly over 20 percent. The economy was down at 13 percent.

Since education is Molpus' strongest suit, and Fordice's weakest, the Molpus candidacy obviously has a solid base for a starting point. Molpus is widely known as the founder of "Parents for Public Schools" and is remembered by many as one of Gov. William Winter's stalwarts in the monumental battle to enact the 1982 Education Reform Act.

Fordice's pitch to position himself as the "anti-crime" governor evidently does not resonate well with the electorate. The Garin-Hart poll showed him getting a less-than-passing grade on fighting crime. His income tax cut gambit when put up against cutting the sales tax on groceries (the kind of tax relief Molpus had advocated) also fell short.

Molpus, it appears, will do well with the electorate if the direction of the upcoming campaign can be focused on state issues rather than on the Clinton administration, or more specifically President Clinton himself.

As any sampling of opinion in Mississippi indicates, Clinton,

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

PTO officers respond to member's letter

To the Editor:

This is in response to Debra Rushing's letter in the Thursday Sea Coast Echo.

First, as PTO officers, we would like to commend the Bay-Waveland School Board for listening and working with us to find solutions to the problems mentioned in the letter. They have corrected some, and others are to be corrected soon.

We agree with some of the things Mrs. Rushing has mentioned in her letter. She is a concerned parent and her concerns are understandable.

The school board is working hard on a five-year plan, and we are looking forward to receiving a copy in the near future.

Thank you,

Lost bank deposit shows honesty of a citizen

Dear Editor:

Several weeks ago I lost a bank deposit envelope with checks plus $180 cash in it.

I tore the shop apart, even vacuumed my car but could find it nowhere.

I finally figured out that I must have dropped it on the sidewalk or it fell out in some parking lot. I gave it up as a loss.

But — yesterday checking my bank sheet of deposits and cancelled checks, I found the deposit I lost had been found by someone and deposited unopened in the bank for me.

I told someone before I lost this deposit that I really did believe in the basic goodness of people, and this certainly proved me right.

Bay St. Louis

Superintendent responds to PTO member's letter

To the Editor:

I read Ms. Rushing's letter to the editor with great interest and appreciate the opportunity to address the issues she has raised.

I will preface my response with the following observations:

1. Two parents of North Bay Elementary School students addressed the school board at the March meeting regarding overcrowding in classrooms.

2. Two parents of North Bay Elementary School students addressed the school board at the December meeting regarding the condition of the North Bay Elementary School facility.

3. I telephoned Ms. Rushing on March 16 and discussed her concerns regarding the issues she noted in her letter.

4. I believe some North Bay Elementary School parents have addressed the school board during "public input" opportunities afforded at each regular board meeting, but since the comments are not recorded in the minutes, the speakers cannot be verified.

Replacement of damaged restroom fixtures was discussed at the November board meeting and a schedule of repairs was outlined publicly at that time by Mr. Rhodes, administrative assistant. The damaged restroom fixtures at North Bay were replaced during the Christmas holidays.

See-saws on the back playground are set in a concrete base. Several truck loads of sand were used to cover the concrete and cushion any falls by students. Two options exist: remove the see-saws entirely or build a small retaining wall around the base to retain the sand fill. School personnel are always concerned about injuries that occur on the school campus.

There are currently three self-contained first grade classrooms with 30, 30 and 29 students, respectively.

One non-graded teaching team has 27 first grade students. Total first grade enrollment as of April 1 was 116; total first grade enrollment Sept. 30 was 109 students.

State guidelines establish a standard of 27 students per class for accreditation purposes. Exceptions may be granted until enrollment reaches 30 students.

At that point the state no longer approves exceptions and the school district has one year to address the matter before its accreditation status is placed in jeopardy.

It is, of course, impossible to determine how many students will move into our school district during the school year or in which grade they will enroll.

Construction of a six-classroom addition at North Bay is to begin shortly and is expected to be completed approximately four weeks after school starts, sooner if weather permits.

Each new classroom will have approximately 1,000 square feet of space and a restroom. Current classrooms at North Bay, constructed in 1960, contain approximately 750 square feet of space.

Water does accumulate on the front walk during moderate and heavy rainfall, and this problem will be remedied with the construction of the new classrooms.

The Bay St. Louis-Waveland School District is currently developing a five-year plan for adoption by the school board in June.

The district committee, composed of local citizens, businessmen and a parent representative from each school has already forwarded its recommendations to the school board for consideration. Two public work sessions by the school board have been held to revise and prioritize these recommendations.

All facilities were evaluated in the spring of last year by a local architect whose observations were presented at last May's board meeting.

A study to project student population increases was also conducted and the results presented to the board at that time.

The board is aware and sensitive to the overcrowding in classrooms and condition of facilities. (Copies of the architect's study and the student population study may be reviewed in the superintendent's office at 201 Carroll Avenue, Bay St. Louis.)

A district steering committee has been meeting periodically to discuss and facilitate the purchase of land for construction of a new middle school.

Construction of a new school coupled with the costs of replacing "big ticket" items, i.e., air conditioning, heating, plumbing, roof repair or replacement, electrical re-wiring to accommodate technology demands, additional cafeteria space, etc., will likely result in a bond issue to fund such improvements.

I appreciate and share Ms. Rushing's concerns as a taxpayer and parent. I trust that there will be as determined an effort to support a bond issue should one be required in the future.

I would like to thank Mr. Robert Kane, Mr. Joe D. McCulloch, Mr. Thomas P. Clarke, Mr. Stan Weidman, Mr. Charles Scianna, and Mrs. Linda Penrose for serving on the District Steering Committee.

Additional thanks are due Mrs. Lynette Beck, Mrs. Debbie Heitzmann, Mr. John Mason, Mr. Buz Olson, Mrs. Felicia Craft Palmer, Mr. Gary Yarbrough, Mrs. Glenda Whitman, Mr. Hal Walters, and Mr. David Turcotte for serving on the district's Five-year Plan Committee.

They have all spent many hours to date working to address the needs of our school district.

Sincerely,
Paul A. Tisdale

BREWER'S WORLD

By Jimmie Brewer

Good morning, dudes and dudettes. The recess bell has officially rung, so forget about your homework and get out there and play!

It's starting to happen to me. Inch by inch, minute by minute and step by step I'm slowly transforming into a CRAWFISH.

I never thought I would ever find a food anywhere in this world that would surpass my Ma's world-famous homemade pizza. Ma, with all due respect, I have a new favorite.

A big ol' hunk of bread and a pile of nasty, spicy, reddened, eye-poppin'-out crawfish is the best eating in the world. I'll bet there's a bunch of Cajuns up in heaven right now sitting around a checker board, wearing overalls and a T-shirt, eating crawfish and drinking beer.

I found, however, that there is definitely an art to eating mud-bugs. While I am still what I would call a rookie at suckin' head and eatin' tail, I had the pleasure of dining with a real Cajun dudette, who took my level of appreciation for watching folks eat crawfish to a new level.

Brenda is a tiny, little, soft-spoken Diamondhead dudette whose family actually evolved from a crawfish.

She's the type gal who can dance with anyone, would never say a bad word about anyone, is always fun to be around and laughs at everybody's jokes.

So it was with her that Mary, myself and our friend Judy spent last Sunday in New Orleans, soaking up the sun, watching some good golf, eating the South's best food and watching various types of human being walk through the French Quarter.

To cap off our day of fun we found a little restaurant in the Quarter called Ralph & Kakoo's and decided to settle in for a little dinner before heading back home.

When that waiter laid a tub of steaming red crawfish and a hunk of bread on our table, mild-mannered little Brenda turned into a Ragin' Cajun eating machine.

I stood in total awe of her as I watched her twist them little heads off one by one. Once she got the head off she knew how to apply just the right pressure with her teeth to crack the head so she could suck up every drop of spicy juice.

No part of them crawfish went to waste. As if she were a surgeon, she carefully and deliberately dissected everyone of those clawed creatures. She even knew how to extract the meat from them tiny little claws.

I was desperately trying to keep pace with my Cajun friend, suckin' the heads and eatin' the tails as fast I could, but I was no way in the same league with her.

If I were a judge she would have received a 9.9 in the art of crawfish eatin'.

I would've had to deduct one tenth of a point because she used a napkin and lip gloss to clean and soothe her lips from the spice and sun upon completion. I, on the other hand, soothed my burning lips by wiping them on my T-shirt and taking a long, cool drink of beer, as any real Cajun would've done.

Praise for do-gooders this week goes out to recently married Ann and Bob, who made me feel like I was worth a million bucks last weekend even though I only had $23.18 in my pocket! PEACE.

IN CONGRESS

By Rep. Gene Taylor

Taylor praises House passage of Balanced Budget Amendment

Convinced that America's skyrocketing $4,800,000,000,000 debt is crippling the country, south Mississippi Rep. Gene Taylor said he was thrilled the House has passed a Balanced Budget Amendment.

"I firmly believe that the interest paid on the debt is crippling our economy," said Taylor, a cosponsor of the legislation. "We squander $800 million every day simply to pay the interest on our nation's debt."

When Taylor first campaigned for Congress he promised that one of his main goals would be to get the nation's budget back on track. Since coming to Congress, Taylor has voted for a Balanced Budget Amendment three times.

"This historic legislation is going to discourage lawmakers from spending more money than we've got," Taylor said. As a cosponsor of Rep. Charles Stenholm's Balanced Budget Amendment, Taylor said he was pleased Congress and the President will be required to control long-term spending.

"To bring it closer to home, Ingalls Shipbuilding could build one new Aegis Destroyer every day of this year on what we pay in interest on the debt," said Taylor. "Now that's a lot of ships in one year."

Though this is a great accomplishment for the House, the bill still has many more hoops to jump through. Once Congress approves the constitutional amendment it will be sent to the states for ratification.

With almost 30 states on record supporting a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, Taylor says he's sure a few more states will join the others in reducing America's cancerous debt.

even though he is a neighbor from Arkansas, is unpopular out in the Mississippi Hinterlands and the bias against Democrats nationally has been running strong.

Of course, the task for Molpus will be to keep from being any way linked to Clinton or National Democrats and to narrow the debate to bread-and-butter issues pertaining only to Mississippi. The Fordice handlers (his hired guru is Jim Weber, the Alexandria, VA-based GOP strategist) can be expected to shift the rhetoric to a popularity (or unpopularity) contest against Bill Clinton rather than Dick Molpus.

In that regard, the Garin-Hart poll indicated that Mississippians don't regard Molpus as some kind of flaming liberal. Only 15 percent said they thought Molpus as some kind of flaming liberal. Only 15 percent said they thought Molpus "too liberal" in his stands on issues. Even among conservative whites just 27 percent rated Molpus too liberal.

Mississippians are about to be exposed to seven months of gubernatorial campaign rhetoric, the longest in state political history since the two combatants for the governor's chair are already known earlier than ever before.

GE Plastics celebrates National Engineer's Week with science award winners

GE Plastics celebrated National Engineer's Week by recognizing 11 science fair participants at an award's ceremony and luncheon March 29. National Engineer's Week is an annual event to increase public awareness and appreciation of engineers and their work.

Several schools approach GE Plastics with a request for science fair judges each year. In those schools, a GE Science Award is given to the students whose scientific project relates to a GE business or the community.

This year's winners and projects of the GE Science Award are:

Trey Treutel, student at Bay Catholic Elementary, "Pollution & Plants Don't Mix";

Troy Fuller, Gulfview Elementary, "Water Filtration"; Elizabeth Wahl, Diamondhead Academy, "The Three Rs of Paper"; Meagan Black, Pearl River Central Elementary, "How is Plastic Made?"; Jennifer Sones, Pearl River Central Elementary, "What is First Call of Rescue 911?"; Rachelle Cordova, Hancock Elementary, "Is Acid in our Rain Water?"; Jeanelle Sonnier, Charles B. Murphy Elementary, "How Do We Breathe?"; Brent Necaise and Suzanne Smith, Hancock High School, "Oysters... How Complicated Can They Be?"; Christian Runnels, Hancock Junior High School, "Environmental Survey"; Clayton Tate, Hancock Elementary, "Can Chromatography Identify Inks?";

Jeff Garwood, plant manager, presented each student with an award certificate and desk clock.

The science fair projects were displayed at the awards ceremony, which was attended by their principals or science coordinators, GE Plastics engineers and all company employees.

Jeff Garwood said, "Throughout its history, GE has been based on innovation, and engineers are critical to that innovation. As part of National Engineer's Week, we wanted to recognize the performance and ingenuity of these students in our local schools, and we're proud to have been able to be part of their celebration."

T&G elects new officers, seeks tourism commission

The Hancock County Tourism & Gaming Association (T&G)—an organization dedicated to the development of tourism and tourism attractions in Hancock County—has elected its new officers and board of directors for the 1995-96 fiscal year.

William R. "Bill" Lady, owner of the Waveland Resort Inn, was elected president of the association. Herb Dubuisson, broker-owner of ERA Bayshore Realty, was elected vice-president, and Janet B. Aime and Lester B. Owens Jr. were elected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Elected to the board of directors for 1995-96 are Jeannie M. Deen, Kenny Glavan, Jim Henrie and T. H. "Doc" Toups. Pat Yarborough returns to the board as past-president of the association.

Organized in 1990 by a small group of Hancock County business men and women, the T&G was established to promote the legalization of dockside gaming, and to help facilitate and promote the gaming and tourism industry following voter approval in December, 1990.

Currently the T&G is engaged in efforts to create an independent tourism development commission for Hancock County, aimed at the increased development of tourism generally, and the acquisition of additional tourism attractions and amenities.

For information regarding the Hancock County Tourism & Gaming Association, or its efforts regarding the creation of a Hancock County Tourism Development Commission, contact Bill Lady at (601) 467-9261, or Jim Henrie at (601) 452-9463.

Governor proclaims April 'Salute to Industry Month'

Noting the importance of Mississippi industry to the state's economy and well-being, Governor Kirk Fordice has declared April as "Salute to Industry Month."

"Mississippi's business and industry is the foundation of the state's economy that provides jobs for its citizens, economic growth for its communities, and tax revenues for state and local governments," Fordice stated in the proclamation. "I encourage citizens to join with me in expressing our appreciation to business and industry in our state for its many contributions to our past, present and future prosperity."

The Mississippi Department of Economic and Community Development's 1994 New and Existing Facility Report lists approximately 651 announced expansions and locations by Mississippi industries in 1994 that will create an estimated 44,363 jobs and involve a capital investment of more than $2.76 billion.

During the year companies announced the location of 95 new facilities, valued at $1.75 billion in investment and creating 32,916 jobs.

Find alternatives to expensive prom dress

By Dr. Ann Jarratt
4-H Youth Development Specialist
Cooperative Extension Service

"Since it's getting close to time for the school prom, I've told my mom I'm going to need a dress to wear. We don't have any money to waste, so I know this may create a problem. After overhearing some of my friends talking about paying several hundred dollars for something to wear, I know I have a problem."

"When I talked to my mom about it, she suggested she could try to make something for me so we could save money. My mother is not a seamstress, so her offer scares me to death. I think I would rather stay home than wear a dress my mother made. I don't want to hurt her feelings, but I know it would never work for her to make my dress. What can I do?"

That is a delicate situation. I know your mother would be pleased to know you're concerned about her feelings and the family's financial condition.

What to do? One possibility would be to visit some nearby new clothing stores. Many times people will wear a dress one time and take it to a shop that sells previously worn garments. I recently read that some people with big budgets dress themselves attractively and at a low cost by buying at shops like this.

I also know party-type clothes can be rented for special occasions—like guys rent tuxedos. Another possibility would be to check the ads in the newspapers. I often see previously worn clothing advertised for sale and at a reduced price.

The most important point of all this discussion is the person who's going to be wearing the dress—you. If you go to the prom with a positive attitude and a pretty smile, the dress will be just a garment on a special person. The most expensive dress in the world wouldn't make a sour, spiteful person attractive.

"The guys I play ball with always get together after the game and have a few beers. I'd like to be a part of the group, but I've made a contract with my dad that I won't drink alcohol."

MILITARY MENTION

SEAMAN BERNER
Navy Seaman Recruit David E. Berner, son of Dwight A. and Elsie M. Berner of Pass Christian, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week program, Berner completed a variety of training, which included classroom study, practical hands-on instruction, and an emphasis on physical fitness.

In particular, Berner learned naval customs, first aid, fire fighting, water safety and survival, and a variety of safety skills required for working around ships and aircraft.

He is a 1994 graduate of Hancock High School.

until I'm at least 18. When I don't drink, they rag me about not being man enough to drink even a beer. I'm beginning to dread game nights because of all the verbal abuse I get. What can I do?"

First of all, you don't have to explain your actions to these guys unless you want to. You have the right to refuse an offer or a request without explanation. You could tell them you don't care for a beer, and your response every time they try to push one on you could be the same—I don't care for one.

You could take the offensive and tell them they're acting like jerks trying to force you to do something you don't want to do. If you are good at saying off-the-wall things, you could come up with a funny line to use.

If you have questions concerning your teenage years, write Dr. Ann Jarratt, 4-H youth development specialist, Box 9641, Mississippi State, MS 39762.

ADOPT A PET!

Love comes in all sizes ...

The animals you see here are orphans and are available for adoption now. Unfortunately, some of them are the product of irresponsible pet ownership, which results in pet overpopulation. Others are cruelly abandoned and left to fend for themselves in a hostile, dangerous and sometimes fatal environment. While, some bad owners who simply were no longer able to give them adequate care.

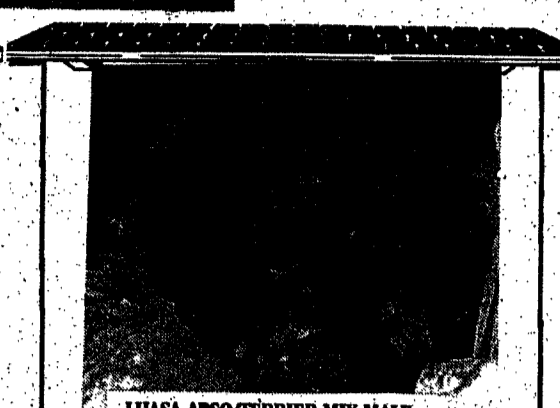

The animals you see here are the lucky ones! Thanks to these merchant sponsors, they have an opportunity to be adopted by you, or else they face euthanasia. If you have room in your heart for a new friend, please give one of these loveable pets a place to call home.

The Waveland Animal Shelter, located on Gulfside Drive, next to the fire station, has many cats, dogs, kittens and puppies available for adoption.

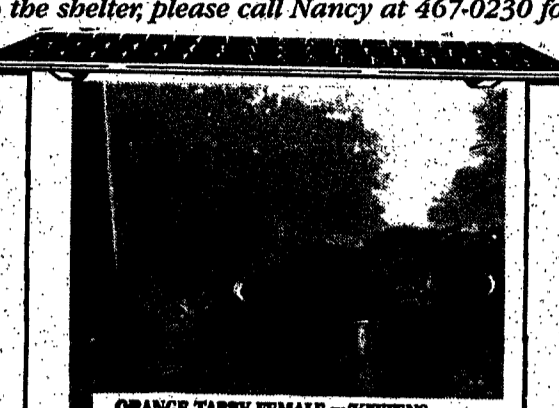

Please be kind to animals and remember to thank these concerned businesses for caring. If you are interested in adopting one of these pets, or wish to make a severely needed donation to the shelter, please call Nancy at 467-0230 for more information.

U of Memphis ends top notch season

BY JOSEPH W. GEX II
The University of Memphis Lady Tiger basketball team closed out its season with a 95-68 loss to Vanderbilt University in the second round of the NCAA Women's Basketball Championship tourney.

The Lady Tigers are coached by Hancock County natives Joye Lee-McNelis and Mike Ladner. Lee-McNelis has been the Lady Tiger mentor for the past four seasons. In 1990-91 the Lady Tigers had a dismal season of 6-22. This year the Lady Tigers finished 22-8 and a second round appearance in the NCAA tourney.

Computer BUGS to meet Apr. 12

The second meeting of the Computer BUGS will be held Wednesday, 6 p.m. at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Home, 208 Third St., Bay St. Louis.

Gene Schloegel, organizer, said the first meeting included some 35 persons and the organization has also received many other inquiries for assistance with problems.

Charter members are still being sought, Schloegel said.

The initial meetings will focus on Windows 3.1 program manager. A film on program manager will be shown followed with questions and answers to using the program manager.

For further information, or registration, call Schloegel, at 467-6772.

The Lady Tigers defeated the USC Lady Trojans, at the time ranked No. 21 in the nation, by the score of 94-92 to move into the second round of the tourney and faced the top seed in the region Vanderbilt.

Although their season ended there, the Lady Tigers have made great strides in such a short time. This season marks the first 20 win season since 1986-87. Memphis won the Great Midwest Conference regular season title with a 10-2 record. Finally, the Lady Tigers earned a bid to the NCAA Women's tourney as the No. 8 seed in the Midwest regional. The University of Memphis started out 0-3 but then won 10 straight games. The Lady Tigers went on to win 22 of their last 27 games.

Lee-McNelis has her nucleus returning next year. She loses only one player, Dena Love, a 5-8 guard who was a walk-on four years ago.

The four starters returning are Keeta Matthews, Heather Newlon, Nicole Murry, and Kitty Allen. Matthews is a three-time first-team All-Great Midwest Conference selection.

Freshman LaTonya Johnson will also return next year. This past year she was selected as the Great Midwest Newcomer of the Year.

State parks featured on Mississippi Outdoors

This week on Mississippi Outdoors, host Mara Hartmann is in the ETV studios for a live call-in show, along with her guest, Bob Tyle, director of state parks for the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks.

Together they talk about the fun opportunities available to the visitor of any one of the 28 state parks scattered around the state. Unsure of what park is in your area or what facilities are available?

Well then, this is your chance to call in to learn of the nearly limitless fun to be had in a state park. Many of the state parks have new facilities, including new cabins, motels, convention centers, improved food service, as well as new boat ramps, piers, hiking trails and group camping areas.

What better time to spend some time in the park than right now. Make your reservations early and be sure to watch Mississippi Outdoors, Thursday, April 13 at 7:30 p.m. for this look at Mississippi's state parks.

The program is a co-production of the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks and Mississippi Educational Television.

Lot bill says forest plans must consider economic consequences

Legislation requiring that common sense and economic issues be factored into policies which change forest management plans was introduced in the Senate by U.S. Senator Trent Lott.

Lott's bill, which would amend the National Forest Management Act of 1976 also calls for phasing in over time any policies which change forest management plans.

Citing the red cockaded woodpecker in the South and the spotted owl in the Northwest, he said that previous forest management changes have failed to anticipate societal consequences on communities and families.

The Lott bill comes six years after the Forest Service unilaterally implemented arbitrary changes to forest management plans in the southern region resulting in timber harvest reduction.

He emphasized his bill will restore the essential balance which the Forest Service must maintain by not emphasizing a single mission at the expense of other resources.

The legislation calls for recognition of the multiple uses of the national forests, phasing in to the greatest extent practicable management change to a forest plan to provide for greater diversity of plant and animal communities, and consideration of such factors as economic consequences faced by affected communities, the impact on state and local revenues, and the agency's financial resources.

A Lott-authored Sense of the Senate resolution incorporating the principles of the Lott bill was adopted by the Senate in October.

Mississippi Power Co. elects new president

Dwight H. Evans

Mississippi Power Company's board of directors has elected Dwight Evans president and chief executive officer of the Gulfport-based utility.

Evans, who was executive vice president for Georgia Power Company, replaces David Ratliffe, who was named to the newly-created position of senior vice president for external affairs for The Southern Company.

The Southern Company is the parent firm of five electric utilities: Alabama Power, Georgia Power, Gulf Power, Mississippi Power and Savannah Electric.

Evans, 46, is a graduate of Georgia Tech where he received a bachelor's degree in civil engineering and a master's degree in environmental engineering. He also holds a juris doctorate degree from Atlanta Law School and is a graduate of Harvard University's program for management development.

Since joining Georgia Power as an associate engineer in 1970, Evans has held positions of increasing responsibility, including vice president of governmental affairs for The Southern Company and senior vice president of public affairs for Georgia Power.

He and his wife Sharon have two children, Bradley and Allison.

Mississippi Power serves more than 183,000 customers in 23 counties in southeast Mississippi and is a member of The Southern Company, which serves more than 11 million people in the southeastern United States.

County cattle producers help fund search for best 'Beef Backer' in town

The search is on for the best in the beef business—the 1995 Mississippi Beef Backer.

Chosen in part by Hancock County Cattlemen and the Mississippi Cattle Industry Board, a winning Beef Backer is a restaurant that does an outstanding job menuing and merchandising beef.

From the menu to the table, nominees compete for the Beef

Backer title by proving that they menu, promote and serve the best beef dishes around.

Announced on June 15, Mississippi's 1995 Beef Backer will then go on to compete for the national title.

A national winner is hand-picked by Michael Deluca, editor of Restaurant Hospitality magazine and a panel of food service professionals.

Dr. Brenda Little receives Women in Science and Engineering Award

Dr. Brenda J. Little of the Naval Research Laboratory (NRL) Stennis Space Center is the recipient of the 1995 Women in Science and Engineering Award.

The award recognizes specific or special scientific or technical contributions by a woman scientist in the federal service and specific contributions made by a woman scientist toward encouraging young girls and women to pursue science or engineering careers, or enhance employment, promotional or development opportunities for women scientists in their field.

Dr. Little, head of the Microbiologically Influenced Corrosion (MIC) Section at NRL, has worked on MIC projects for the Department of Energy and the U.S. Army, and has served as a consultant to the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Atomic Energy Laboratory of Canada.

In addition to her accomplishments in basic research, Dr. Little also works on U.S. Navy platforms to identify and control MIC. Her research has been used to determine the cause of corrosion failures in weapons systems, seawater piping systems, storage tanks and other U.S. Navy equipment. She is currently investigating fungal growth on wooden spools and corrosion of wire ropes used to transfer people and weapons between ships.

Her research effort includes basic and applied research, with original research findings published in 45 peer-reviewed journal articles, 10 book chapters and 61 technical articles in symposium proceedings. In 1981 and 1988 her publications were acknowledged with publication awards. She has been invited to present 62 technical papers at national and international meetings and has given 47 volunteered presentations.

Dr. Little has chaired 14 technical sessions at national and international meetings, contributed an invited article to a special issue of Electrochimica Acta for the 60th birthday of the renowned electrochemist Karl Heitz, and was selected to organize sessions on MIC for the prestigious Fischer Symposium on Electrochemistry in Karlsruhe, Germany, June 1991 and a similar session to be held in New Orleans this year.

In 1988 Dr. Little received a patent award for an innovative dual-cell corrosion measuring device, the only published technique for quantifying the electrochemical impact of microorganisms on metal surfaces. In 1985 she was selected by the National Science Foundation (NSF) as one of eight American scientists to attend a workshop on biodeterioration in La Plata, Argentina, and to attend a similar NSF workshop in Paris, France in 1988.

Dr. Little is an adjunct professor at the University of Southern Mississippi and Montana State University, and has collaborative research with investigators at Harvard University, University of Southern California, University of South Alabama, University of Tennessee, Texas A&M University, Naval Surface Warfare Center, Naval Undersea Warfare Center, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The Singing River Chapter of the American Business Women's Association selected Dr. Little as one of the ten 1990 Women of the Year on the Gulf Coast for her participation in programs for women in science and technology. She has been keynote speaker for several Women in Science and Technology Conferences for the Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College, has participated in career day programs sponsored by the Girl Scouts Chapters of Mississippi, and has presented lectures at honors classes in chemistry and biology and local schools.

As a result of her activities, Dr. Little is frequently requested to serve as a consultant on science fair projects, asked to provide recommendations for universities, and provide career counseling. She has officially served NRL in various capacities in promotion of women's rights and as chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Committee.

In July 1988, Dr. Little graduated from the Department of Defense-sponsored Executive Leadership Demonstration Program designed to provide women with overview, role models and skills for career advancement.

She is a member of the American Chemical Society, the Adhesion Society, the Electrochemical Society, the National Association of Corrosion Engineers, Sigma Xi, Federally Employed Women, and the Mississippi Academy of Science. She has served the Gulf Coast Chapter of Sigma Xi as secretary, president-elect, president and past president.

She serves as the government/university liaison for the Mississippi Academy of Sciences, routinely reviews proposals in the area of materials science for the NSF and National Sea Grant Consortium, and reviews scientific papers under consideration of publication in the Journal of Corrosion, Materials Performance, Biofouling and the Journal of the Acoustic Society of America.

In addition to numerous performance awards, Dr. Little was selected for "Who's Who in Technology Today" and "American Men and Women in Science" in 1986, received NRL publications awards in 1981 and 1986, received an invention award and Best NRL Patent Award for 1989, and the NRL Alan Berman Research Publication Award in 1994.

Tour Jamaica

By Anna Marie Piazza
There's Jamaica then there's Jamaica.

There's the Jamaica where you fly into Montego Bay — "MoBay," as the locals call it — land at the Donald Sangster International Airport, on the NW coast, ply into the Coral Cliff hotel, the famous 32-room Harry M. Doubleday house, built in 1902, the first structure on the island to have electricity, set into the side of a cliff overlooking the magical Caribbean, a green-purple-blue jigsaw puzzle rimming the island in its brilliant light, you enjoying the best reatment, food, flowers, and view of your life, carefree and laid-back, catered to in the most absolute luxury you'll ever experience, by a people enculturated to treat visitors like utter royalty.

There's no place on earth like it: awesomely beautiful, profoundly welcoming. And I'd go back in a minute — if I could stay put in Montego Bay.

But hey! There's the Jamaica where you fly into MoBay, rent a car, drive to Negril — the road so fearsome they sell T-shirts that say, "I survived the road to Negril" — where the coveted beaches lie, then move through the interior of that Third World country of threatening mountain terrain, jungles, rain forests, on roads the likes of which you won't see anywhere in Baton Rouge or Clinton or Bay St. Louis, I gar-on-tee you: narrow dirt trails with no shoulders (thousands of feet high and getting higher all the time), pitted and pocked, bouldered and bawdied with landslides from mountainsides, crowded with hordes of people in cars and on foot, cows, goats, pigs and chickens, festooned with multi-colored shacks of utter poverty that makes your heart break.

For all the terror of the mountains, trekking through them is, I must admit, perversely exhilarating.

There's no escaping, however, the ineluctable beauty of this island country, where flora and fauna of every color and variety flourish profusely at every turn; where the weather is perfect year round; where the famous Blue Mountains dominate every scene, even the beaches; where the water is so crystal clear and green, gray, purple, blue you'll think you never saw water before.

"I want you to see more than these four walls before you die, B," Andy'd said as he proposed to treat Hil and me to eight days in this tropical wonderland. I gladly accepted, thinking eight days touring the sandy coastlines of this small island — 146 by 22 miles — would be just like going home, to the familiar Mississippi Gulf Coast. I couldn't have been more wrong.

I was so terrified in the car, in the unrelenting mountains, that I cringed and cried the whole time we were in motion, where I plunged to my death a thousand times over — and guess what: I never got used to it.

The roads were so treacherous, steep and unprotected, unmarked, with dangerous precipices (and even more dangerous drivers) at every twist and turn, that I myself turned into a strident termagant, spoiling the venture for Andy and Hil to that extent.

Andy, an Aires, a mountain goat, was in his element, having traveled mountainous terrain all his life, and Hil, who'd traversed the mountains of Mexico and Colorado, had known what to expect. I alone had visions of sandy beaches and comely seaside camps.

I was soon to realize, however, that I sweat nothing, absolutely nothing (except being in a moving vehicle) in all of Jamaica.

I was a different person on the ground. Lighting in the beautiful towns I felt human again, safe and secure in the gracious hospitality of the unfailingly hospitable natives.

Scared as I was in motion, that's how much I felt at home when we settled into gracious hotels at night.

"I'm a wuss," I declared more than once, "there's no way around it," and they concurred, silently and politely of course.

In Jamaica I alternated between ecstasy and sheer hell, depending on whether I was in a car or not, hell being fear and nothing more (well, maybe pain). Though I had no fear whatsoever of the gracious and ever-helpful people — only their mountainous roads.

There are two and half million people in the tiny island country of Jamaica, 70,000 on MoBay, 700,000 in the capital city, Kingston (which we avoided like the plague).

If you're a food-and-flower person, Jamaica's the place to go. Never in my life have I seen such exotica — 550 kinds of ferns alone on the island — or eaten such consistently elegant food: ackee and bacon, green-banana porridge and fried dumplings (in luscious coconut oil) for breakfast, ackee being a vegetable that cooks up like scrambled eggs and which the FDA bans as an import for reasons unknown to me; jerk chicken, pork, goat, fish and conch; jerk, Jamaica's version of fast food, a king of barbecue that's soft, marinated in exquisite spices, mostly allspice — always allspice — which is called "pimenta" and grows profusely there in aromatic trees; escoveitched fish, which was so delectable and mysterious even

Hil the chef failed to reproduce it exactly upon our return.

The best meat pies are sold in MoBay. Blue Mountain coffee, the best in the world, which we drank every morning in our hotel rooms, sells for $15-30 a pound. Their famous Appleton rums and Tia Maria and Red Stripe lager beer grace every bar and grocery shelf.

The native tobacco is aptly called "jackass rope."

Then there's the ganja culture.

Ganja is the second largest source of income for the Jamaicans, after tourism. Though it's illegal and never smoked openly, it's readily available to natives and tourists alike; just ask a "tout" (a vendor) outside your hotel, or along the roadsides at the little vegetable-and-fruit stands, where a tout will hand you a ganja stick for $20 — about four ounces.

Bauxite is the other source of income in this poverty-stricken country. The bauxite industry was started during WWII, in 1942, and there's evidence of it in the red hills, out of which is mined alumina, a white powder refined from the raw bauxite.

In all our extensive travels we saw only one doctor's office, no hospitals. There's no such thing as social security, welfare, Medicaid or Medicare, food stamps, HUD housing, even HMOs (90% of the population live on less than $1,000 U.S. a year).

Earl K. Long looks mighty good in the light of Jamaica's sparse medical services, and I count my blessings withal.

If — "When," Andy says — I go back to Jamaica, I'll stay in MoBay, at the gracious Coral Cliff hotel, the "house" that was "the beginning of tourism as we know it on the island and have come to depend on it," luxuriating in the sybaritic, unworldly retreat of my conceits, my only threat the rides to and from the airport.

"I feel like I've been a guest in someone's home," Andy remarked as we left Coral Cliff for the second time. The beautiful and gracious Jeanette Lynch, who is more like a mother than a manager, said upon our departure: "You will return."

And who knows: perhaps we will — but it'll be with a prescription of Valium, I gar-on-tee you.

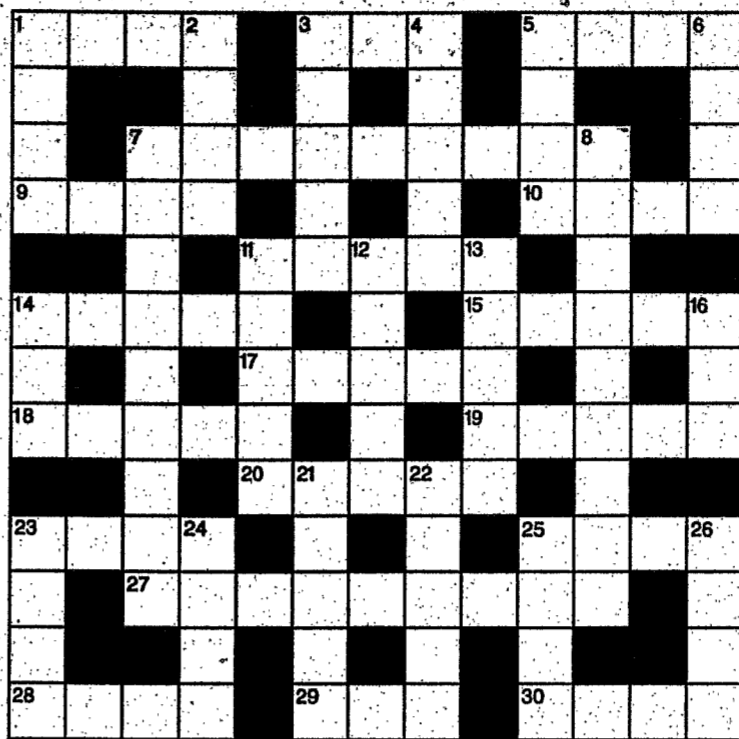

Six months after my return from Jamaica, I was diagnosed with lupus, its insidious effects already having "scarred" my brain, according to the neurologist who reviewed my case, leaving me with unutterable phobias, rampant in Jamaica (rampant in Baton Rouge).

At least it's good to know there's a neurological basis for becoming a "wuss" at age 59, after a reckless, fearless youth. Bien entendu.

Pastimes, anywhere and everywhere, on the island include birdwatching, caving, diving, fishing, golf, hiking, racing, sailing, tennis and theatre (in Kingston).
